Public Looks to Harding For Cure for Strike

they would be bankrupt by July 1st. unless aid was forthcoming from Congress but that aid hasn't been given and now October is here with railroad earnings picking up. The railroad have been making voluntary reductions in freight rates but Mr. Harding who has from the first insisted that rates must come down probably will not be satisfied this time with promises of reductions but will find a way to make those reductions effective.

The fact that nearly two weeks must elapse before the strike order takes effect is looked upon as giving ample opportunity for negotiation. Meanwhile the word from railroad sources is that a strike can be fought and will not paralyze traffic. Gen Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Railroad is reported as saying that the strike could be beaten by his road. It may be that his employees will not prove as loyal to the unions as the leaders of the latter think. It will be noted that the union leaders have postponed the strike order on the Pennsylvania two days beyond the date of the call to the workmen on other roads. This is interpreted here as meaning that it is hoped to influence reluctant employees on the Pennsylvania by demonstrations of strength on western railroads.

Feeling between the railroad executives and the labor leaders has been growing more intense every day. The chances of reconciliation between them are not considered good. Only the intervention of the executive can force a withdrawal of the strike order but it will have to be accompanied by a reduction in freight rates before it will get very far with the employees.

"The Birth of a Nation"

Much of the tenderly poetic appeal of "The Birth of a Nation" is due to the subtle acting of Miss Lillian Gish in the part of Elsie Stoneman, the northern heroine. Miss Gish is a little creature of the "golden rule" blonde type, which makes for photographic beauty. She is singularly graceful, and her features never lose their piquancy. Her eyes before the camera are singularly expressive, and her acting conveys sincerity as well as true feminine charm. Perhaps the most poetical scene of the entire drama is the one in which she and Henry Walthall, as her Southern lover, pour out their hearts to each other through the agency of the ancient symbol of Venus, goddess of romance, the dove. Not daring, at this point in their courtship, to kiss each other, they lavish their affections alternately on the nestling bird. Another scene in which Miss Gish displays her exquisite charm is the one in which she plays with a kitten, with such grace and caressing meaning that the audience invariably experiences a delightful thrill of sympathy.

Miss Gish is sharply contrasted in "The Birth of a Nation" with the beautiful brunette, Miss Miriam Cooper, who plays the Southern heroine. The little northern heroine is of northern birth, just as Miss Cooper is a Southerner, her native state being Ohio. For a time, in her early girlhood, she and her sister, Dorothy, also famous in the moving picture world, lived in Missouri with their mother.

Miss Gish, when a mere child, won fame on the stage as a dancer, and became a member of the ballet in one of Sarah Bernhardt's productions. She was introduced to D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation" by Mary Pickford. Mr. Griffith instantly recognized her talent, and rapidly promoted her in picture after cast her in her present role of the Northern heroine in "The Birth of a Nation."

Star of "The Kid" Inimitable In "Peck's Bad Boy"

AGAIN TONIGHT.

Equalling, if not surpassing, his wonderfully successful performance in "The Kid," Jackie Coogan, six-year-old marvel of the screen, gives a truly delightful and refreshing characterization in the title role of "Peck's Bad Boy," which opened an engagement at the Wilson Theatre last night.

The production, as a whole, is a splendid accomplishment. The most amusing and interesting episodes from the celebrated works of the late Governor George Peck have been incorporated in the screen version. The subtitles, which were written by Irvin S. Cobb, fairly snap, with the brilliant humor of that clever writer, and Jackie Coogan's interpretation of the part of the mischievous youngster who is constantly getting himself and others into trouble is one of the most pleasing contributions that anyone—man, woman or child—has yet given to the screen.

In "Peck's Bad Boy" Jackie Coogan is the same sprightly, lovable little chap that he was in "The Kid." In some ways he may be a little naughtier, but he gives a portrayal of a real American boy who, despite his shortcomings, wins the sympathy of all.

"Peck's Bad Boy" is brimming over with laughs and is the conveyor of not a few thrills. It is a credit to the whole motion picture industry, and a genuine triumph for the child star. It is a picture that all should see.

Jackie Coogan has excellent support in this picture. Doris May plays the role of the "bad boy's" sister. Wheeler Oakman is the Man in the Case. James Corrigan portrays Pa Peck, while Lillian Leighton is seen as Ma Peck. Raymond Hatton is the village grocer; Charles Hatton, Jackie's Buddie; Baby Gloria Wood, Jackie's "affinity," and yes, "Tar Baby" is Jackie's dog.

"Peck's Bad Boy," one of the finest First National attractions released this season, will remain at the Wilson Theatre again tonight. Other features on the program were a Toonville Comedy and Topics of the Day.

COLOR LIGHTING

EFFECT FOR CHURCH. New York, Oct. 17.—The new system of color lighting in St. Mark's-in-the-Bowwerie, designed to influence emotion so as to make the congregation more susceptible to the spiritual message, was used yesterday at all three services. It was described by Claude Bragdon, the architect who installed it, in a meeting following the afternoon service, as the beginning of a new art of greater emotional power than music. Mr. Bragdon predicted that the time was not far distant when "light organs" would be as much a part of the church as the present organ, on
